N-P LEAGUE PLANS
EXTENSIVE DRIVE
IN BADGER STATE
SHIFT TO WISCONSIN
AFTER HARD BUMPS
IN DAKOTA.

SEEK LEADERSHIP

Re-Election of La Follette and Blaine; Purpose: Want 50,000 Members.

Madison — The Nonpartisan League is about to enter on an extensive program of expansion in Wisconsin, to make this the leading state after following the Dakota high lights encountered in North Dakota this year. Choctaw C. Platt, editor of The Leader, league paper and spokesman for the organization, said Thursday.

Political plans are announced by him as calling for the re-election of Senator Robert M. La Follette and Governor Blaine, together with other La Follette officers and legislators, and to form a state membership of 50,000 before the next campaign.

"Expanding on the success of North Dakota, the league is determined to hold its own in Wisconsin," Mr. Platt declared. "With a league governor and several other state officers, with friendly backing from Senator La Follette and his supporters, the league will make Wisconsin the banner state."

Will Repeat Tactics.

Politically, the league plans in 1922 to repeat its tactics of 1920 and to hold in June a state convention endorsing candidates for governor and other state offices, and for congressmen. Of course it will endorse the candidacy of Senator La Follette.

"There were over 20,000 members in this state when the 1920 convention was held and the league now has set its stake at 50,000 before the convention of 1922," Mr. Platt said.

The new issue of The Leader, league paper, will appear a call by Lt. Gov. George F. Comings for a conference of progressive and labor forces of the state with leaders of the Nonpartisan league, to formulate a tentative platform, to be ratified.

"The slogan will be: 'Increase income taxes, lessen property and real estate taxes, and make liberal exemptions in assessing farms' and homes.'

Legislation Fails.

"While the league has been unsuccessful in putting through the legislature its most important measures for the improvement of farm conditions, this only intensifies the determination to weed out from the next legislature the scalawags and reactionaries."

While the record of the legislature is one of disingenuousness, the record of Governor Blaine, with regard to important appointments, has been most gratifying. Particularly commendable are the appointments of J. Q. Emery, dairy and food commissioner; Charles D. Rosa, tax commissioner; Reuben G. Knutson, for the industrial commission, and L. E. Gettle for the railroad commission.

Undoubtedly the league will enforce the candidacy of Blaine for governor, Comings for lieutenant-governor and Hall for secretary of state."

Home Brewers Given Minimum

Milwaukee.—Five of the 10 saloonkeepers arrested on state warrants Wednesday night in behalf of return of the state constitution director under the new Stevens law, for having home brew beer in their possession for sale, were fined $100 and costs, the minimum, by Judge George E. Page in district court Thursday.

Three saloonkeepers sought jury, those depending on assurance of their counsel that a jury will not convict for making home brew, while the others were released.

Two saloonkeepers received continuances until August and were released on $500 bail.

The phone began ringing a few minutes after the paper was out. Calls came so fast that I hardly had time to leave the phone. Then when we went home for the evening I asked the operator to switch all calls for the store to the house. During the dinner hour I kept the phone right beside me at the table.

Shortly afterwards people began coming to look at the house. They came so fast that it was almost necessary to ask them to form a line and take their turn. All told we had more than forty inquiries for the place.

STILL SEEK BASIS
FOR IRISH PEACE

Thursday Conference Without Results; De Valera to Consult Followers.

(By ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London.—The basis for a conference to attempt a settlement of the Irish question has not yet been found; it was announced in the official communiqué issued after a conference Thursday between Eamon de Valera and Premier Lloyd George who have been conferring with the object of finding such a basis.

Mr. de Valera and his colleagues left the meeting early, will return to Dublin Friday and will confer with Mr. Lloyd George after further discussions with followers there.

The conversations between Mr. Lloyd George and Eamon de Valera have been terminated for the present without the objective having been attained.

At the final meeting of the British prime minister and the leader of the Irish republicans, Mr. Lloyd George submitted definite proposals, which were represented as the considered judgment of himself and his cabinet constituting suitable ground for a full fledged peace parley, based on his interviews of the last week with Mr. de Valera and Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier.

These proposals, it is learned, represent as the considered judgment of himself and his cabinet constituting suitable ground for a full fledged peace parley, based on his interviews of the last week with Mr. de Valera and Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier.

The prime minister presided over a meeting of the cabinet council Wednesday night and gave his ministers a detailed history of recent Irish negotiations, as well as his own view of the situation. Following this he submitted his proposals to be given to Mr. de Valera and, according to morning newspapers, the ministers were almost unanimous in support of the premier.

Cabinet Shows Offer.

Following this he submitted his proposals to be given to Mr. de Valera and, according to morning newspapers, the ministers were almost unanimous in support of the premier.

Just how the cabinet stood, it is certain the majority in favor of the government program was large, notwithstanding rumors of a divergence in the ministry. This reported unanimity increased considerably the number of some of the more extreme contestants who were willing to depend on what they are told at this time, the government suggestion being that if this delegation is dissatisfied there may be many sessions from the condition.

Two unions members of the house of commons, Col. Martin Archer-Shee and Col. John Grotton, already have formally withdrawn their support from the coalition, as they disagreed the government's stand towards De Valera and the Irish republicans.

In the Janesville district, an investigation by press representatives indicates fraud and misrepresentation was practiced by the draft candidates.

LOCAL PLANT GETS MILK DESPITE BAN OF MARKETING CO.

PRODUCERS' ASSOCIATION FAILS TO KEEP OUT INDEPENDENT MEN.

MEETING IS CALLED

Important Session Called for Thursday Night—Casey Makes Statement.

Organized milk producers around Janesville failed to stop the supply of milk to the Janesville Pure Milk company on Thursday morning, for dairymen outside the Chicago Marketing company came to the rescue of the company for butter fat prices.

Although the members in the Rock county association effectively blocked any policy of borrowing milk among other distributors, they could not keep out the independent dairymen.

Company Gets Milk.

Employees of the Janesville Pure Milk company declared Thursday that they had all the milk needed and the delivery schedule was kept up.

To meet the new turn of affairs, the milk producers have called an important meeting for 8 p. m. Thursday in West Side I. O. O. F. hall, Janesville to formulate plans to further their demands of being paid marketing company prices or limit the supply to Janesville, if necessary.

Included in this amount is the cost of the distributing company.

Blames the Agitators.

"It would have been all right except for the agitators, who want to keep things stirred up," declared Henry Casey, owner of the Janesville Pure Milk company.

"We did call a number of the farmers in the area to a meeting. That is all I can say about it for the facts of the issue were correctly reported."

COMPENSATORY DUTY ON COTTON TEXTILES IS DENIED BY HOUSE

Washington — Compensatory duties on cotton textiles manufactured from long staple cotton were denied by the House Thursday, in line with its action Wednesday in refusing compensatory duties on leather products.

The vote of 122 to 50 represented a coalition of republicans with democrats to defeat the proposal.

The Ostfriesland rolled over on her side and went down sternly, the message said.

Madison—Madison faces a serious shortage of ice according to local dealers. Calls have been received from surrounding cities, it is said, asking for ice to be sent to them through the summer. Their request cannot be granted because of the limited Madison supply.

SAMSON WINNER IN KANSAS FIELD MEET

Agents' Reports Indicate Good Showing—Await More Truck Parts Here.

A Samson tractor outfit led a field of 11 contestants at a tractor meet and plowing demonstration at Emporia, Kas., last Thursday according to advice from Samson agents received at the plant here. The Samson outfit turned the stubble under clean and led the field by 11 minutes, the report says. About 1,200 Kansas farmers watched the demonstration.

Stanley J. Zapenske, secretary of the Samson Tractor company, is now acting controller following the resignation of W. F. Woodbury, who has left the city.

"We are now booking orders for next year's trade," stated J. A. Craig, Samson president, Wednesday. "Business appears to be fairly good."

Truck Assembly Delayed

Inability of the Chevrolet plant at Flint, Mich., to ship materials here more rapidly is still delaying completion of the local plant for exclusive manufacture of Samson trucks. Shipment of truck parts are arriving here at the rate of about five carloads a day with more than 200 carloads to be shipped, Mr. Craig said.

"We had hoped they would average about 20 cars a day but reduction in prices of General Motors corporation automobiles has increased the demand at Flint as well as other places with the result naturally that the entire force is engaged in production," explained the Samson president. "Shipping truck materials here now is what you might call a hairy job with them."

Truck Line About Ready

The truck line at plant here is about completed, it was learned. The plant is prepared to take up assembly of trucks in big quantities when the company has enough material on hand and decided to go into production.

The truck line is similar to the lines used for assembly of Samson tractors.

The line formerly used for "D" tractors has been changed to be used for trucks.

TRAFFIC AND TOURIST SIGNS

Need of placing traffic and tourist signs in and near Janesville, were detailed by H. J. Cumplingham, during his four minute speech at the Rotary club luncheon Wednesday.

Traffic signs, it was declared, should be so arranged as so to encourage tourists stopping in the city.

A few days with local friends.—Mrs. Andrew Porter, Janesville, was a guest of Mrs. Helen Kerns, Wednesday.—Mrs. Fred Garthwaite, Janesville, and Mr. and Mrs. Byron Garthwaite Rockford, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Davies, director of the budget, who has been appointed to the Senate.

Mr. Davies' appointment has been saved. In other words, just as far as he is saving, his been accomplished at the end of the national capital.

Plans of spending an equivalent amount are found at the other end. And on top of it all, the new shipping board finds it necessary to ask for $300,000,000 to salvage the wreck on its hands.

The president finds himself in the awkward situation of appealing to congress, directly or indirectly, to concentrate on the tax program and let other matters alone.

Farmers' Bloc is Working

The agricultural bloc in the Senate is pushing the farm export bill with the vigor that the house was pressed. The president himself has not said anything for or against the farm bill and there is no doubt that he would like to see agriculture aided in just such a practical way but the question of establishing a precedent and giving $100,000,000 to one class is a perilous one. Other industries may come forth with requests for aid.

Furthermore, the farm bill gives the authority for a possible appropriation of a billion dollars annually as it is a progressive thing with $100,000,000 to start with.

Husband's Leadership

Mr. Harding asserts his leadership, somewhat to the discomfiture of some elements in the senate as well as the gratification of others. His closest friends would welcome another trip to the capitol. They insist that the senate is up for consideration.

Our schools have failed in physical education
more than in mental education. Dr. J. MacA-dress, an authority on child hygiene, says that probably from 20 to 30 per cent of the children in the United States are undernourished.

"But," he adds, "it is possible to do away with malnutrition. One school in the Middle West had 73 per cent of its children underweight, but by hard work, at the end of the year only 6 per cent were under weight."

In states where children are required to be in a good condition of health before they are granted that both children and parents become interested in the practice of hygiene to meet the requirements of the law.

Although the movement for physical education legislation has been most active during the past two years, the first state law requiring it in the schools was passed on June 20, 1916, by Illinois.
Other states passed similar measures before April 1918.

The states are all interested in physical education," says Dr. E. Dana Caulkins of the National Physical Education service, "but we need the federal stimulus. Our greatest help lies in the passage of the bill now before Congress which, among other things, provides for a 50-50 financial basis. That is the federal government will give one dollar for physical education for each dollar which the states will provide.

The purpose of physical education is twofold, involving instruction in the care of the body and training of the development of the body. The need for such training is undeniable when one considers, for instance, the case of John Wiggins.
John's father had raised a perfect mound of a big ribbon pig for a county fair. John himself, however, was seven pounds overweight. When it was suggested that he drink some of the quantities of milk which was produced on the farm, he said scornfully:

"Milk! Why, we give milk to the pigs. I drink coffee." John also thought it was too cold to bathe in the morning; liked to stay up late at night; thought he had plenty of air in the daytime without having his windows open at night. Nevertheless, the deficient seven pounds ranked in John's mind and he gave the "rules of the game"
a trial. John was 13 years old.

The health conditions of country children are worse than those of city children. This may seem odd but it is true. Statistics jointly compiled by the American Medical Association and the National Educational Association have proved it.
In the cities interesting summer classes and playground facilities are planned to keep the children off the streets in the fresh air as far as possible.
In the country home conditions are too frequently unsanitary and in many cases the children do not have the proper kind or amount of recreation.

In the days when father and mother went to school and even in the early part of the generation succeeding them, the maternal parent usually kept a watchful eye on the younger members of the household. Before allowing a child to set foot over the doorstep for school, she inquired if his teeth were brushed, his nails and ears clean, his shoes polished and his hair combed. Even then he might not be able to escape in time for a game of tag before school; if father chanced to spy a bread crust uneaten on his breakfast plate. Many a time, in those days, was a child uncomronuously recalled
to the table by an irate parent and told,
"not to stir out of this house for school until all that mush has been eaten up."

But conditions have vastly altered. Many mothers are becoming absorbed in other interests, not to say jobs. Others are so taken with new ideas of allowing little Algernon to develop his own individuality that they sigh resignedly when he whines, "Any Maw! I don't want it," and hurry him off to school. The modern father who sees two-thirds of his family at the breakfast-table is a rare individual.

Now, it is teacher with her much-talked-of small salary and, usually, enjoying the state of simple blessedness, to whom falls the additional duty of seeing that some 20 or 30 little Algernons and Susies brush their teeth, have their lunches in the right kind of boxes, comb their hair, sleep with the windows open and do various other things, both at home and at school, that are for their physical good.

The method of teaching the health game is in the teacher's own hands and considerable ingenuity and originality have been evinced in the way
the world has been handled in various schools.
Some teachers encourage the cutting out of pictures illustrating health habits and the making of posters. This work and neat printing can be taught during the painting lesson. One teacher devised a vegetable race on the blackboard, etc.
the vegetables good for children being lined up on Monday, and each vegetable moving a step ahead as a child reported eating.

Health education is finding its way to the child mind through almost all of the courses of study.
Arithmetic problems deal with quantities of milk,
cereal or the proper spacing for good ventilation;
English lessons, written and oral, may be guided along health subjects; little plays and verses are devised by the children themselves and presented at parent-teachers' meetings.

So far as possible, school authorities secure the cooperation and interest of parent-teachers' organizations and women's clubs. The Council of Federated Women's Clubs has shown great interest in the work. Many clubs have been of material assistance in furnishing the schools with scales to weigh the children, toothbrushes, equipment for getting warm lunches for the children, and in numerous other ways.

Our work with physical education is also interesting foreign countries. Czechoslovakia has made inquiries as to methods pursued along this line, through the American Red Cross. A well known Australian club woman has carried enthusiastic ideas of the work to her native country.
Japan has compulsory physical education in her schools for more than 30 years and Japanese students in the United States have shown eagerness in watching our progress.

Ambassador Jusserand of France states that,
poor as the French are after the war, the government has found them eager to have appropriations for this work in their schools.

England gives national aid to local communities for providing physical education. Sweden has had universal physical education in high schools for years. Germany and even Russia are taking progressive measures along this line.

Crop reports generally show an enormous corn production. Most of the crop is far enough along so that it cannot be seriously damaged in the weeks to come before harvest. But in root vegetables and the other small grains, oats, rye, and barley, there will be a constant fall, we are told, in the production estimates. Therefore, it may be readily understood that there will not be a great oversupply of grain. This will tend to stiffen the market, give the farmer greater buying power and stimulate all business. That is just what is needed to start better business all along the line.

PLAYING THE HEALTH-GAME

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington, D. C.—Curious visitors from European shores, who have compiled "impressions" of their sojourns in the United States from time to time, have emphasized, among other things, the typical American's evident capacity for making a game of everything, from the most frivolous and least important of his pleasures to his most serious business and domestic problems. It is in the spirit of a game that physical education authorities are trying to wipe out the high percentage of malnutrition and general unfitness among school children. Charts recording the gain in weight of members of the class, are compared each month. The development of good habits is likewise noted. The result of such comparison spreads from classroom to schoolhouse, from building to county records, and then to the notice of state authorities, until it finally triumphantly shunned in the public eye via educational and other periodicals.

Our schools have failed in physical education
more than in mental education. Dr. J. MacA-

VACATION THOUGHTS.
Never noticed that squeak in the stairs before.
Yet it haunts me now with its dismal tone.
And it seems to say to me over and over:
"This is your house, but you're all alone!"

What's got into the clock down there?

That ticks so loud? It is all so queer,
I never have heard it before, I swear.

When the boy was home and the mother here.

What's gone wrong with the living room?

The chairs look ghastly and gaunt and grim,
Like cold, gray figures beside a tomb.

They're not the same without her and him.

Why should I jump when a curtain flaps?

And what's the matter with me tonight?

A little nervous and tired, perhaps.

But why should I feel that nothing's right?

On, an empty house is a dismal place—

Despite what cynics and scoffers say.

Oh, how home's not home with the folks away.

And the clock will tick and the floor will squeak.

And the rooms seem ghastly and cold and black.

The nights will be dreary and long and bleak.

Till the summer goes and the folks get back.

MARTIN B. MADDEN.

Should Martin B. Madden, Republican congressman from Chicago, be selected as chairman to head the all-important house committee on appropriations, to see life's ambition of that gentleman would be realized.

Mr. Madden has been a hard worker on the committee for many years. If the seniority rule is followed Congressman Davis of Minnesota will get the post. But considerable opposition exists to that. Madden had helped, and Madden, who has been in congress since 1905, bids fair to be the beneficiary of much of that opposition.

Martin Barnaby Madden was born in Darlington, England, on March 20, 1885. He received a rather scanty education in the public schools and night schools, and began at the age of ten in the same business. He came to the United States while very young, settling in Chicago.

Madden actively took up politics in 1889,
when he became a member of the Chicago City council, a position he held for eight years. He was a delegate to the Republican national conventions of 1896 and 1900. He has represented the First Illinois district in congress since 1905.

The Barnes show, some time ago, leased the regular circus grounds near the county fair grounds and put up its paper. Then the Sells-Floto engaged the same date. The two will be within a stone's throw of each other. The situation is the first of the kind ever experienced here.

Check Being Made

According to William R. Scrivens, barber, the name of Scrivens was signed to the registration card by his cousin, George Scrivens, who disappeared when the call to colors was made. The mother of the George Scrivens, is a widow, unmarried and now living in Stoughton.

The Park hotel owners did not know of any Elizer Griffen, and no one by that name was ever registered there during the war.

People residing at 409 North Elm street denied knowing Leland C. Page, a family by the name of Babcock had registered there as 202 Clinton street. Investigation shows that there is no residence of this number and the people residing in the 200 block did not know of such a man.

On the registration card as 202 Clinton street, investigation shows that Peter L. Schultz did not room at the association during the draft period.

People residing at and near 315 Prospect avenue know no such person as James E. Tarrin. Nor did residents of Wall street know of a King E. Walkers.

Reward Is Offered.

Limited time prevented further investigation of the alleged slacker list. It was apparent in the vicinity of course, the draft committee failed to find their address to mislead the draft board until they could leave the country.

LEMONS AT 4 CENTS
ON WESTERN COAST.
60 TO 70 CENTS HERE

The men whose names appear on the lists, and who were under the jurisdiction of the local board of Rock county, according to the association, the public draft records classified and reported by the draft authorities as deserters from the military service of the United States, reach the war department's command. A reward of $50 and transportation expenses is offered for the capture of the alleged deserters and delivery to the nearest army post, which is Camp Grant, near Rockford.

Civilians are given the authority to make the arrest under the articles of war.

In most instances the government draft slacker list has been grossly inaccurate, even containing names of men who had been in the service for months before they were classified as deserters or slackers.

The list is of men who did register and then failed to respond, the government having no means of making a check on those who failed to even register.

Attorney Thomas E. Nash of the defense, asked Burns if he had testified on direct examination that he met Alberg, Weaver, and Felsch in Cincinnati hotel, the morning of the 10th, and was coming to the trial.

All the campers at Camp Rotardale are on their toes to get the most out of the two remaining days of summer.

Most of them are staying, which will make about the middle of August to almost half of normal in the camp.

(Continued from Yesterday.) Over her night clothes she had thrown an Indian blanket-robe, out her hair was unbound, falling in great golden ropes almost to her knees. She had obviously been roused from sleep to face the relentless clamor of one who begged for shelter from the cold, and in her hopeless ignorance she had admitted this drunken brute. She had fed him, she had shown him a bunk in Tim's own room where he might sleep.

With a scream of indescribable fury Meadows fell upon him. He thrust his hands between a bare hairy chest and Goldie's aching abdomen and into that he crashed with frantic force. "I'll open my eyes."

Goldie and "Dad" Meredith were with him. He lay still trying to recall certain sights and sounds which were enveloped in that density of smoke. A flash broke through and he remembered. He emitted a hoarse roar and tried to sit up.

"Easy, easy now," the doctor warned with Goldie's hands pinned him down as effectively as a cable would have done. "No more excitement this night, if you please. You have lost a lot of blood, but I regret to see it was not your fighting blood. Never did I try to work with such a fellow! Now, lie still, Tim, do you hear?"

"Doc had to sew up your face," explained Goldie, laying his pale head against his father's bare neck. "I helped him, didn't I?"

"And I had to try to keep you still when the doc was wearing on, but you are an awful fighter, and Look!"

She rolled back the sleeve of her blanket-robe and disclosed a dark blue mark on her arm. Meadows groaned and smeared the place across his parched lips.

Goldie smiled. "Oh, it's all right now, she said. "I only wanted to show you what you are likely to do to me if you don't keep quiet."

"I must be quiet," he agreed. Then, immediately, he jerked himself up. "Where is he?"

"Safely out of the way," answered Meredith. "Try not to talk, or you will open that slit on your face."

After that night, he lay on the back door that he had not opened! If he would, and in the front one he cut a little trap through which Goldie was commanded to identify each visitor before drawing the heavy bolts and chains. A rude of guns stood within easy reach, and dangling on the hotel was a Rooster containing a half-cooked revolver.

Naturally Goldie had long since grown accustomed to the deer which looked like a part of some medieval picnic, and so the rack more suitable picnics, and the mounted police barracks. But Goldie never saw them without being struck by their incongruity in the room which otherwise was replete of domestic cheerfulness.

Goldie would not let him come to the kitchen and help her make the coffee. This was unusual, unless the usually shy-faced Ruth came along with him, and then she was silent again.

He bent forward to hit the limp head once more when something struck against his own head; the light went out.

He used to be lying down smothered by smoke so thick that it crushed him like a weight. He tried to reach out toward that knotty throat which must be somewhere near, but he was powerless to move. His breath was being slowly hampered from his body. He struggled and heaved his tried to shout. His mouth filled with smoke as thick as porridge and he choked. Then something incomprehensively strong

DETAILS

The fact that her hostess looked bored and her host was giving her only part of his attention, acted like a bath upon the warmth of Ruth's enthusiasm.

She stopped a moment, then very lamely finished what she happened to be saying about the plans for the forty town.

There was a silence.

"But you're stenographer for the Committee then?" Myra asked. She had laid aside whatever earnings she had been doing.

"No, I'm treasurer of the Civic Committee, among other things," Ruth said. "Am I chairman of another committee that sees to the public parks in the town. I'm a partner in a real estate firm in the town too; it used to be a tiny place, now I was a stenographer there. I suppose that's what your mother meant. But the place has grown." Marketown is booming.

In spite of the recent display of boredom, Ruth was again growing enthusiastic. Myra was looking a little more interested, now that the personal part had come up.

"Well, of course, you're dressing grand," she said. "I supposed your father must have left some money when he died, or you sold your house and you're buying some good clothes now you're in the city."

"Poor father! He left nothing but bills," Ruth said. "But the bills are paid. As for the house, I thought once we would have to mortgage it, and once they threatened to sell it for years of unpaid taxes. But that's all paid up too. I'm sending Mother a weekly allowance, and the money I spend on clothes here was my own savings up."

"What did you get?"

Ruth tried to remember, and Myra's eyes brightened as she listened. "I'd like to get some dresses from Wayne again," she said, mentioning the name of the most expensive dressmaking establishment in the city. "Emily buys there all the time; she'd give old things to us who don't have to buy them. Tim let me take what he calls 'cast-offs.' She gave Tim a sweet glance from her gray eyes. It was apparent that Myra liked being ordered about.

"And of course you can't buy those things on $40 a week," she went on. "That's a lot of money for a man Tim's age to make, but it is costing something awful to live since the war."

Ruth said nothing. Presently Myra asked:

"Are you staying at the same boarding house you were at the other time you came to the city?"

Ruth shook her head.

"No, I have a suite of rooms at a hotel." She mentioned its name.

"A suite? Did you inherit a million?" Tim had dropped his sporting page.

"No, but you see, the Committee hired it and is paying for it, and my other expenses. I have to see many people, and they say I must make a good impression."

"Still, you must be making money."

Myra pursued the subject with great interest, though Ruth was getting very uncomfortable and wanted to talk other things. "How much do you make?"

"I don't know." There was a note of impatience in the girl's voice. What could she say—after the confession that Tim was only up to $40? Then she decided to tell them the whole truth.

"I have a salary of $50 a week from the Committee."

"My, that's a lot. That's more than I've got at home, Tim, and Myra suddenly kept quiet. Ruth went on.

"Of course, there's the money my half of the real estate brings. I don't know what that will bring a year, the business is growing so. I got $3,000 when we closed the books a month or so ago. But I put it in bonds, and I bought an old tract of land that the city didn't want, and sold it later, when the factory town plan was extended for $5,000. I've been buying things to sell, buy other things, so it's hard to tell what my income is."

Myra was much impressed by all these figures. Tim was even more so.

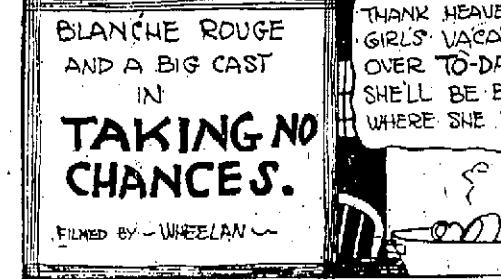

"You're rich, Ruth," he said.

"Not yet. I will be in a couple of years. I think my share will be $10,000 this year, but I'll have more, out of

Lathrop Loses Hard Opener as Beloit Fairy

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

A fellow named Dyer, with a resolution composed of a triple and a horse, dyed "Dusty" Bill Lathrop to death Wednesday when the former Janesville Tractor pitcher was initiated into the lineup of the Beloit Fairies. The operation took place at Kenosha and was performed with the aid of the Simmons Ecc company team and George Beale, formerly the rubber first sacker of the Milwaukee crew. The score was 4 to 2, and the two hits.

But this is far from meaning that Lathrop had a bad day. It just happened that the breaks went against him for he allowed only nine hits and his Beloit mates made nine bobbles.
